Golden Millet.

To the Editor of the Raleigh News:

Sir:—Having written by request last season, several articles regarding Golden Millet, giving my experience regarding its nature, culture, &c., and lately having inquiries from your State, I will, if you will allow me the space, give for the benefit of your farmer patrons, my knowledge of this wonderful grass.

First, it will grow in almost any climate or soil. It is sown broadcast as wheat or oats, three quarters to one bushel to the acre, just the same as oats, cut as hay or cut as grain, and tied in bundles, which is a nice way especially if you wish to thresh for seed.

It matures in ten to twelve weeks, growing five to eight feet high. It produces three to five tons of hay and fifty to one hundred bushels of seed to the acre, does better in wet and dry extremes than any crop I have any knowledge of; will never fall down or waste, winds and rains do not prostrate it, will stand two or three weeks after it is ripe and wait the coming of the harvester. Do not be in a hurry to cut it; let it mature well.

As a food for all stock I know not its equal. All eat it eagerly and thrive on its nutritious qualities. I have never seen anything as good for milk cows, if well cut before feeding. Fowls that eat the seed will lay the year around.

I would advise any brother farmer who can get pure seed to sow it, but be sure you do not get the old common millet or Hungarian. It is the very thing to insure an abundant crop of excellent hay for winter feeding. I am sure those who have been in the habit of sowing corn for fodder will do so no more when once they try the golden millet.

Another great recommendation is, it is a great fertilizer. It leaves the ground in a loose, mellow condition and free from every other growth. It literally smothered out every weed, &c. By sowing as soon as the danger of frost is over you can save a crop and turn under a crop on same piece of ground in one season. One rain after it is up is sufficient to insure a fair yield. I have friends who have sold enough to more than pay for the land on which it was grown in one crop.

I have paid as high as $4.50 per bushel, but it can be had at about $2 now. I would willingly pay $10, if it could not be had for less. It is the best crop to raise for profit or for use I have ever tried. I have not a single objection to it except that it takes labor to save it. In cutting from ten to twelve hands to bind after a machine, and they will have hard work to keep up if the machine runs constantly. When once ripe it is easily saved, and does not spoil easily—that is, it is not hard to cure.

Respectfully, Wm. JOHNSON.
Lebanon, Ky., Feb. 8, 1877.

Manure in Liquid Form.

We wish it were possible for us to impress upon every agricultural reader the great value and importance of saving and using liquid fertilizers, such as may readily be prepared at home, and applied with little trouble—especially to garden vegetables, strawberry beds, flower borders, &c. One of our exchanges, in alluding to this matter, recommends a simple and cheap apparatus, similar to a large lye vat or ash hopper, which may be filled in the proportion of two bushels (more or less according to size of hopper) of stable manure, a half bushel of hen droppings, one peck of good top soil, half a bushel of new ashes; then set the hopper to running by pouring over the whole hot or cold slops, soap suds, and the refuse liquids of the household. In a week or two stir the compost, and run the liquor through again. After extracting (as you may think) all the virtues of the contents, the latter may be used for mixtures with other compost, or applied immediately as a fertilizer, and will prove equal if not superior to almost any fertilizer you can procure.

The art of farming mainly consists in the art of manuring, or supplying to the crop the proper kind of food in proper proportions of sufficient quantities. The atmosphere is inexhaustible, the soil is not, but God has given man the materials for its fertilization, and he must cultivate his understanding and physical powers in order to apply them.

The mechanical character of the soil very much controls the kind of plants that will naturally grow on it. On very light lands, rye, of all grains, grows best; on heavy clay lands, wheat, clover and grass grow most luxuriantly. Thus we find that the physical character of the soils are of great consequence, and determine the agricultural products of the regions where they exist. Soils may be improved mechanically as well as chemically; in fact all the conditions must be fulfilled if we would have a perfect result.—Dr. Scott.

Cleaning Land.

In an editorial on the rotation of crops, the London Agricultural Gazette remarks:—"Practically, a good rotation should distribute the farm work equally, and give an opportunity for cleaning the lands." The importance of exterminating all weeds, and raising more valuable plants, is too little considered in this country. If the weeds yield a greater income than clover, tame grass, or other cultivated plants, they should be treated as a valuable crop, and have a place in the rotation. Profit is what the farmer works for; and if filthy lands, full of cockle, cheat, docks, iron weed, thistles, briars, wild onions, red root, burrs and beggars' lice, pays more per acre than land free from all pests of this character, yielding clean harvest, then the labor of cleaning land is money thrown away. But, alas, tall weeds give no grain for bread, nor cotton for clothing.

IMPROVE THE POULTRY.—Just now is a good time for our lady readers to increase the value by improving the quality of the poultry. We take it for granted that this is woman's business, as the "sterner sex" universally so regard it. Well, it is a pleasant occupation, this taking care of chickens, turkeys, ducks and geese, and it can be made very profitable, too, by judicious investments in improved stock.

Farmer's Wives.

Some years ago I was talking with Dr. Gray, chief physician in the New York State lunatic asylum, at Utica, and he told me that, as a class, more farmers' wives were brought to that institution than people of any other occupation. He said:

"The reason why this is so, is that their minds are constantly on one unchangeable routine of work, from daylight in the morning till late at night—no change—no relaxation—no rest."

Farmers should note this fact, and be forewarned before it is too late. It is astonishing what a vast amount of labor farmers' wives perform! Many of them get up and have breakfast ready before their husbands are out of bed. Then it is work, work, work, till near midnight; the mind all the time being on their duties—how they shall supply the meals; how the washing and ironing are to be done; when can the floors be scrubbed; how the children are to be clothed and kept tidy; and many other things, all combined, are enough to break down the strongest woman in the land!

"In no case," said Dr. Gray, "is it safe to be constantly thinking upon one thing or subject," and in cases where the brain has become weakened by too great a strain on it, as with students and literary men, the remedy is rest and outdoor recreations. Then when men are in trouble, a constant brooding over it is dangerous. The mind should be drawn away from it as much as possible.

Farmers, your duties to your wives are plain. Do not allow them to overwork, to wear out prematurely. It is better to leave a few acres less to your heirs, and less in bonds and mortgages, than to see your wives go down to premature graves, with the epitaph, "Died of Farm drudgery."

DUTIES OF A GOOD NEIGHBORHOOD.—A good neighbor is a great blessing. A single individual may do a vast amount of good in his neighborhood by using his influence to improve the morals, manners, and the state of society in general. A good neighbor looks to the interest of those around him. If his neighbor is sick, he kindly offers his service; if he sees his fence thrown down and his growing crop exposed to the cattle, he will stop and put up the gap. A good neighbor will lend as well as borrow. On the other hand a bad neighbor is a most troublesome individual. He sows the seeds of discord, and tale-bearers scatter it far and wide, and in due time springs up a plentiful harvest of troubles—such quarrels as embitter life and render existence miserable.
